Earth Day Digital Toolkit

From now until April 22, Earth Day goes digital and together we EARTHRISE!

On Earth Day, April 22, 2020, we have two crises: One is the COVID-19 coronavirus pandemic. The other is a slowly building disaster for our environment.

While the coronavirus may force us to keep our distance, it reminds us of the importance of the fight for our health, livelihoods, and planet. If we don't demand change to transform our planet and environmental issues, our current state will become the new normal — a world where pandemics, polluted lands and waters, disappearing forests, and extreme weather events span Africa, leaving already marginalized and vulnerable communities even more at risk.

From now until Earth Day (April 22) African's can join the world as we EARTHRISE, a global digital mobilization that drives actions big and small, gives diverse voices a platform and demands bold action for people and the planet.

We are calling on everyday citizens to rise up and come together to engage the public, educate people about the environment, and act to make positive and sustainable changes to protect Africa and the Earth. Although the challenges right now are immense, individuals have the power to unite and build a movement that is impossible to ignore.

We love to see safe environmental actions around the continent during these tough times.

One #EarthDayAfrica volunteer taught his cousins how to plant a tree in their backyard while staying safe at their house. They named their trees after themselves!

On April 22nd, We EARTHRISE

On April 22, join us as we EARTHRISE, a global digital mobilization that drives actions big and small, gives diverse voices a platform and demands bold action for people and the planet. Over the 24 hours of Earth Day, EARTHRISE will fill the digital landscape with global conversations, calls to action, performances, video teach-ins and more.

There will be a 1-2 hour segment dedicated to celebrating Earth Day in Africa. We will use the #EarthDayAfrica and #EARTHRISE to share our messages, stories, success stories, and calls to action!
